The Philosophical Writings of Prémontval

By Lloyd Strickland

“Strickland’s clear translations give us new access to Prémontval’s impassioned, personal, and heterodox writings on a wide range of philosophical topics: human and divine freedom, necessity and chance, proofs of God’s existence, providence, and the mind-body problem. The informative introductions for each selection and the copious explanatory notes allow us to understand and appreciate the texts both in their own terms and as contributions to the philosophical culture of Frederick the Great’s Prussia. An impressive volume.”

—David Forman, University of Nevada, Las Vegas

“What Strickland has organized here is nothing short of astonishing. He brilliantly captures the heart of Prémontval’s philosophical views with this selection of pivotal texts for English readers for the first time ever. Both students and researchers of modern philosophy will find immense value in this stunning volume.”

—Charles Joshua Horn, University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point

“Lloyd Strickland should be applauded for making available for the first time in an accessible English translation the philosophical writings of the quixotic French mathematician and philosopher André-Pierre Le Guay de Prémontval. The threads of Prémontval’s often heterodox ideas shine through in Strickland’s translation and, woven together with the accompanying introductory materials and notes, offer the reader rare insight into this long overlooked philosophe. I have little doubt that The Philosophical Writings of Prémontval will stand the test of time as an invaluable window into the intellectual world of Enlightenment France.”

—James A.T. Lancaster, University of Queensland

“Lloyd Strickland brings to the attention of Anglophone scholars of the Enlightenment an understudied and original thinker. This anthology provides novel access to the idiosyncratic philosophy of André-Pierre Le Guay de Prémontval, controversial member of the Berlin Academy and rather prolific author of metaphysical and theological tracts.”

—Tinca Prunea-Bretonnet, University of Bucharest
